WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

Dry conditions today will be replaced by chances for rain on Thursday north of Cape Mendocino, as a weak front moves through the area. A warming and drying trend will begin on Friday as a strong ridge of high pressure builds over the west coast for the weekend into early next week.

San Francisco Weather:

Dry weather conditions and unseasonably warm temperatures will persist through the upcoming weekend as the region remains under the influence of an upper level ridge.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

Dry and mild weather is expected for the forecast area through the next 7 days with any shower activity now expected to remain north of Shasta County. High clouds will move across the area at times.

Hanford Weather:

High pressure will continue to build over the region with warm temperatures through the weekend. Patchy morning fog will decrease each day.

WEATHER

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

High pressure and offshore flow will dominate the weather through the weekend with above normal temperatures and some gusty canyon winds. For early next week some cooler conditions are expected as a trough of low pressure approaches the west coast.

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Surface high pressure over the great basin will continue periods of locally gusty northeast to east winds for some inland areas through Thursday afternoon. Strengthening high pressure aloft will create warmer weather through Thursday. Slow cooling will develop near the coast Friday and spread slowly inland through early next week. A little greater cooling is possible towards the middle of next week as a weak low pressure system moves toward the California coast.

Southeast California Weather:

Northerly flow aloft is expected to continue over the region with north to northeast breezes diminishing through the day. High pressure will build into the area from off the pacific for the remainder of the week and weekend resulting in mostly clear skies and a slight warming trend. Temperatures will generally peak over the weekend before low pressure passes to our north through parts of the great basin possibly introducing a slight cooling trend into next week.
